

Trends in educational expenditure

Gerald Burke

CEET, Faculty of Education, Monash University

The paper provides an analysis of the factors underlying changes in educational expenditure in Australia: demographic changes, changes in participation rates, changes in relative prices and changes in 'real' cost. Estimates for the main sectors are presented, though comparisons are limited by differences in financial reporting and changes in collections over time.